for a Celebration of the Life of*

Barbara C. Anderson
February 17, 1943 - April 8, 2016

For over thirty-five years Barbara Anderson was a relentless advocate for taxpayers across Massachusetts. Her accomplishments included leading the campaign for property tax relief for which she was called "The Mother of Proposition 2½," repeal of the state income tax surtax, defeat of the graduated income tax ballot question, and the rollback of the "temporary" state income tax increase.

Barbara was a recognized and outspoken grassroots activist for decades; a co-host with Howie Carr and Jerry Williams (WRKO) on his weekly "The Governors" program during the Gov. Dukakis era; a frequent guest and commentator across the media; and a weekly columnist for The Salem News and The Eagle-Tribune Publishing Company.

Barbara retired as executive director of CLT last year, but stayed on in a less demanding capacity, still participating daily with the organization that was her life.
